Liturgical Jottings

Throughout the Mass, we pray the words of Scripture. When the priest raises the host, saying, "Behold the Lamb of God," we hear words of John the Baptist in John 1:29. There, John points out Christ to the crowd, saying "Behold, the Lamb of God, who takes away the sin of the world." The Lamb of God is the undefiled lamb. The second part comes from Revelation 19:9, in which the angel says, "Blessed are those who have been called to the supper of the Lamb."

Quote of the Week

If one has the answers to all the questions - that is the proof that God is not with him. It means that he is a false prophet using religion for himself. The great leaders of the people of God, like Moses, have always left room for doubt. You must leave room for the Lord, not for our certainties; we must be humble. Pope Francis

Looking at the Readings

The Sunday Gospel prepares us to hear Lent's call to conversion that is integral to the act of repentance.

Luke tells us that some among the crowd report to Jesus a massacre of Galileans by Pilate. They want Jesus to explain why good people suffer. At that time it was usual to attribute suffering as evidence of sinfulness. Jesus challenges this interpretation. Those who were massacred were no more or less sinful than themselves. Jesus replies that violence, fatal accidents or natural disasters ought not to be interpreted as punishment for sin. These daily life event should not be attributed to God's will. Jesus strongly warns them (and us) that unless we turn away from sin we will not have life.

The parable that follows of the barren fig tree contrasts the patience and hopefulness of the gardener with the practicality of the property owner. When told to cut down the fig tree because it is not producing fruit, the gardener counsels patience. If properly tended, the barren fig tree may yet bear fruit. The image of the property owner is often assigned to God the Father - the judge who balances the books and holds everyone to account for the fruitfulness of their life. Similarly Jesus takes on the role of the gardener who toils for three years (in his public ministry) to tirelessly provide the tree with every possibility to yield fruit. The underlying emphasis to the parable is on the mercy of God and the hopefulness that ongoing opportunity will yet bring us life.

These readings remind us that God is offering us life; but eternal life doesn't simply fall into our laps. God does not override our freedom of choice but nurtures and leads to us choose well. Faith is about choice and living with uncertainty; we are offered the tending efforts and grace of the gardener to help us with our choices.

Being Enriched

Coveting is not just about wanting to amass more and more possessions but, we become greedy - we want everything, every experience, everything the other person has and more - more friends, more possessions, a higher position. And we want what 'they' have! We can become dissatisfied with our own lives and we begin to resent others' achievements, success, good looks, intelligence, athletic abilities, health, friends, family background... well, just about anything really. That can lead us to try to bring them down, to put them in their place - a story here, a negative comment there, a bit of gossip to spread and so on. Comparison can lead to a lot of unhappiness. I have been in workplaces where that happens.

Where does your heart lie, where are your treasures? Some time to reflect on questions like these may help identify them:

What are five essential values we want our children to embrace above all others?

What are the five things you are most thankful for in your life right now? What are some of the things you do to show this thankfulness?

What is an accomplishment you feel most proud of?

Your biggest goal in life?

Before you die, what would you like to have accomplished?

What fears do you wrestle with the most?

What movie or television program have you seen in the last year that you wish all your friends could see?

If you didn't have to worry about making a living, what would you most like to do for the rest of your life?

There are lots of other questions we might ask ourselves but mostly we want to find the things that really enrich our lives, rather than those things which just satisfy our desires.
